Hanting the best Whig in Albany

A recent adventure is told of a clever, well-todo young farmer from Tennessee, who left home for the Hochester State Fair. Making first the circuit of Boston, New York city, and the Hodson river, he found himself a total stranger in Albany, without any other funds, than a check on New York, payable to his own order, and drawn by an unknown, though respondible, Nashrille broker. The mecessity of identifying himself never once nectured to him. When reminded of it, his concern on the subject was scarcely increased, as he enjoyed the soft-conscientsiess of at least three of the very highest passports to confidence in any land protending to civilization. He was a consistent tetraller, a zealons Wesleyan, and a good whig. His first appead was to his Temperance host of the—house.
